Also, a swamp of between four and five hundred acres, situated at the head of Vernon river, about six miles from Savannah, without Mr. Baker's barony, exceeding good for corn and indico, also some prime land. A deep may lead at the landing, and any vessel may come within two miles of it; the land is bounded on a creek on which a saw-mill is now erected. It has a house, barn, garden, and a great number of mulberry and fruit trees; about fifty acres are under a good fence, and it never yet wanted water in the driest season to make indico, this whole an exceeding healthy and pleasant situation.

Likewise one hundred acres in Purrysburg township, about three miles above the town, joining east on lands to which no owner appears, west on Savannah river, a large body of pine barren, supposed to be vacant, is contiguous, and it has the advantage of a bluff that never overflows. Also, One hundred and twenty seven acres right opposite, exceeding rich land, with a convenient place for a settlement, and well stocked with oak and cypress. These two tracts to be sold together.

Whoever inclines to purchase may treat with Mr. John Hodges, in whose hands the plats are to be seen. c. 72.

TO BE SOLD, at public vendue, at the usual place in Charles-Town, on the 19th day of February 1765, and may then be entered upon.

THE valuable plantation called MOUNT LAUREL, belonging to Francis Yonge, situated in the parish of St. Paul, upon a branch of Toogadoo-creek, where a large schooner may load within half a mile of the buildings, which are valuable, consisting of a large dwelling-house, two good barns, and all other necessary out-buildings, with a valuable pounding water-machine: The land is in three tracts, making in the whole one complete plantation or body of 1256 acres, about 400 acres of which is fine rice land, with proper reservoirs of back water, so that in the driest seasons the rice-land always yields a plentiful crop; about 700 acres of choice corn or indico land; the remainder, is mostly timbered with the best of pine for sawing; the said plantation adjoins lands of John Bull, Esq; the Stobo's and Mr. Christopher Wilkinson's. One other tract of 500 acres of pine and bay land, adjoining the above, will be sold at the same time; as will the crop of corn, and other provisions, that may be there at the time of sale. Any person inclinable to purchase the whole before the day of sale, may apply to the present proprietor at Stone, in whose hands the plats and titles may be seen, and the land may be viewed before the sale, by applying as above directed. A true copy of the four plats, may be seen in the hands of the subscriber. Credit will be given, if required, to the first of January 1766, the purchaser giving good security, and paying interest from the day of sale.

From the LONDON CHRONICLE.

Account of an extraordinary DUEL.

His Grace the Duke of B— to the Lord B—, being the first Letter that passed between them.

My Lord,

THE affront which you gave me at the Imperial Minster's ball last night, would argue me a person very unworthy of the character I bear, to let it pass unregarded. To prove me that adventurous Knight which your evasive expression would have given the noble Lady to understand, may perhaps be the most acceptable means to reconcile your spleen: Convince me then that you are more of a gentleman than I have reason to believe, by meeting me near the first Tree, behind the Lodge in Hyde-Park, precisely at half after five to-morrow morning; and that there may be no pretensions to delay, I have sent by the bearer of this two Swords, of which I give you the privilege to make a choice, and shall approve of whatever terms of fighting you'll be pleased to propose. In the interim, I wish your Lordship a good rest.

Whitehall, 9 o'Clock.

B—.

Lord B—'s Answer to the above.

I Received your Grace's message, and accept the contents. It would give me a sensible concern to be obliged to give up the pretensions which your Grace is doubtful of. It was not an oversight, I presume, that your Grace gave me the privilege to chuse my Sword, except your Grace have been so little used to this sort of ceremony, as to have forgot that it is the challenged's choice. This, however, is but a trifle, (if any thing); the terms I leave to our seconds, and will not fail to appear at the time appointed, and in the interim I wish your Grace a very good night.

Cambridge-Square, 11 o'Clock.

B—.

After my Lord B— had answered his Grace's Letter, he visited several of his friends, and was observed to be remarkably jocose when at Lady Nottingham's, which occasioned a young lady, after his departure, to remark, that she fancied there was something very agreeable to his lordship renewed again, relating to the countess of E—, well knowing his extraordinary passion for that lady. He told the messenger that carried his letter, to bring his Grace's answer to lieutenant-general D'Lee's, the gentleman whom he had pitched upon for his second, and with whom he lay that night, at his house in St. James's-Street; which was done.

About four in the morning his lordship waked, and got softly up, without (as he thought) being observed by his bedfellow; and dressing himself, buckled on his sword, and fixed two spare flints in his pistols, then charged them; but recollecting that his Grace's second would probably desire to see them loaded, drew them again. By this time the lieutenant was awake, and observing his lordship take a book out of his pocket, tho't it improper to give him to know he was observed; his lordship kneeled down by a small jasper table in the lieutenant's bed-room, and seemed to pray with great devotion for a quarter of an hour, often repeating, just loud enough to be heard, the errors of his youthful days, and fervently supplicated the Almighty not to impute them: After which he arose, and bid the lieutenant awake, for he would not willingly have his Grace, he said, wait a moment; as the morning was a little rainy, and cold withal. By the time they were accoutred, it wanted just half an hour of the appointed time: lieutenant D'Lee desired to view his Lordship's sword, and examined the point and handle very cautiously, then returned it, by adding, that he heartily wished it was going to be employed in a cause more serviceable to his country: his lordship answered, it could be of little consequence in that respect, let the event be what it would. Just as his lordship was opening the door for their departure, the lieutenant-general desired to know if there was any thing his lordship thought proper to communicate? To which he replied, it was very fortunate that he had mentioned that, and delivered a letter, directed for the right honourable the countess of E—, desiring that he would give it to her alone, and not upon any consideration trust it to another hand; as for his family affairs, he said they were already settled according to his will.

On this they immediately left the apartment, and arrived somewhat before the appointed time, and took several turns from the lodge to the tree. His lordship several times expressing wonder at his Grace's delay, though it was not two minutes by lieutenant D'Lee's watch above the limited hour when he arrived, attended with one second only: He bid his lordship a good morning, and hoped they had not waited for them long; then pulling out his watch, said, he had hit it to a point; adding, at the same time, that he had rather die than break his promise upon such an occasion. His lordship returned the expression, with this addition, that though they had waited a little, there was sufficient time left to dispatch the business they were upon. To which his Grace replied, the sooner it is dispatched the more leisure there will be behind. In the interim the seconds were preparing their swords, and each one loaded his adversary's pistols; then agreed to the following terms, viz.

1st. That the distance of firing should not be less at either end than seven yards and an half.

2d. That if either should be dangerously wounded the first discharge, the duel should cease, if the wounded person would own his life was in the hands of his antagonist.

3d. That between the firing and drawing of their swords there should be no limited time, but each should endeavour to make the first thrust.

4th. That if either should yield, as in the second article, during the engagement with the sword, whether by a wound, false slip, or any other means, then the engagement should cease.

To which articles they both consented, his Grace stripped off his coat, which was scarlet trimmed with broad gold lace, when my lord B—'s second stepped in to unbutton his waistcoat, on which, with some indignation, his Grace replied, do you take me to be a person of so little honour as to defend myself by such base means as hiding a shield under my ecublet? Lieutenant-general D'Lee desired his excuse, adding, he was bound in honour to see justice done in the case he had espoused. The same ceremony passed upon his lordship, who had already pulled off his coat, which was crimson with broad silver lace; and both the combatants being now ready, my lord B— added, "Now, if it please your Grace, come on," when they instantly both stepped into the circle. His Grace fired and missed, but my lord B—, perhaps from more experience, knew that battles were seldom won by hasty measures, deliberately levelled his, and wounded his antagonist near the throat. They both discharged again, when his lordship received a slight wound in his turn, on which they instantly drew their swords, and impetuously charged each other, rather each of them meditating the death of his adversary, than his own safety. In the first or second thrust lord E— entangled the toe of his pump in a tuft of grass, and in evading a push from his antagonist, fell on his right side, but supporting himself by the sword hand, by inconceivable dexterity, sprung backwards, and evaded the push apparently aimed at his heart. A little pause intervening here, his Grace's second proposed to his lordship a reconciliation, but the ardent thirst after each other's blood so overpowered the strongest arguments of reason, that they insisted to execute each other's will, whatever might be the consequence. Nay, the anger of his Grace was raised to such a pitch of revenge, that he in that critical moment swore, if for the future either of the seconds interposed, he would make his way through his body. Thus, after finding all remonstrances of saving them without effect, the seconds retired to their limited distance, and perhaps one of the most extraordinary duels ensued that the records of history can produce, fairly disputed hand to hand. The parrying after this interval brought on a close lock, which Monsieur Des Barreux says, nothing but the key of the body can open; in this position they stood for, I dare say, a minute striving to disengage each other by successive wrenches, in one of which his Grace's sword point got entangled in the guard of his lordship's, which, in fact, his lordship overlooked; so that this disadvantage was recovered by his Grace, before the consequence which it might have brought on was executed. At last, in a very strong wrench on both sides, their swords sprung from their hands; I dare say his lordship's flew six or seven yards upright. This accident, however, did not retard the affair a moment, but both seizing their shuffles at the same time, the duel was renewed with as much malevolence as ever. By this time his lordship had received a thrust through the inner part of his sword arm, passing right forward to the exterior part of the elbow; his, at the same time, passing a little over that of his antagonist, but alertly drawing back, I think partly before his Grace had recovered his push, ran him through the body a little above the right pap. His lordship's sword being thus engaged, nothing was left for his defence but the naked left arm, and his Grace being in this dangerous situation, yet had fair play at almost any part of his lordship's body; yet he bravely put by several thrusts exactly levelled at his throat, till at last, having two fingers cut off by defending the pushes, and the rest mangled to a terrible degree, his Grace lodged his sword one rib below his heart, and in this affecting condition they both stood, without either being able to make another push, and each of them by this time was, in a manner, covered with blood and gore; when both the seconds stepped in, and begged they would consider their situation, and the good of their future state; yet neither would consent to part, until, by the greater loss of blood, which his lordship sustained in being first wounded, he fell down senseless, but in such a position that he drew his sword out of his Grace's body; but recovering himself a little before he was quite down, faltered forward, and falling with his thigh across his sword, snapped it in the middle. His Grace, observing that he was no longer capable of defence, or sensible of danger, immediately broke his own, and fell on his body with the deepest signs of concern, and both expired before any assistance could be got, though Dr. Fountain had orders from his Grace not to be out of the way in case he should be called upon that morning. Thus fell these two gallant men, whose personal bravery history can scarcely equal; and whose honour nothing but such a cause could stain.

SAVANNAH, (in GEORGIA) December 20.

Northern and Southern, the main branch of that dominion extend, and a small one in each, to make general instructions, will set out from this port in the schooner Auguiline-Packet, armed with eleven Marines besides the Master, and sufficiently provided with every thing necessary for a voyage of eighteen weeks, in order to make a survey of coast and continent from the Bay of Guadalupe, to the Cape of Florida.

Thursday last put into Tybee, the snow Charles Polly, Patrick Craw, master, from Falmouth, for Sunbury, for which port she is since sailed.

January 3. Thursday last, being the festival of St. John Evangelist, the most ancient and honourable society of Free and Accepted Masons met in the lodge-room at Mr. Machenry's, and from thence, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, proceeded to the church, where they heard an excellent discourse, suitable to the occasion, preached by the Rev. Mr. Forbes, who arrived some time since from England, in the Friendship, Capt. Ball, in his way to St. Augustine.

H. E. J. J. Accounts from the Cherokee and Creek Countries, represent every thing quiet there, and likely to continue for. The Creeks seem averse to trading any where but through the old Augusta Path.

There is great Reason to believe that a very considerable Quantity of Hemp will be raised in this Province the current Year, for Exportation, and that it will in a few Years more become another Staple Commodity. The Public Treasurer has paid the Bounty on near One Hundred Thousand Weight, since January 1764.

The Beaufain, Captain Curling, which sailed for London last Saturday, has on Board one of the most valuable Cargoes shipped from hence since the Peace: It consists of two hundred and forty-one Casks, containing one hundred and three thousand, three hundred and seventy-five Pounds of Indigo, twenty-six Hogheads, and sixty Bundles of Deer-Skins, eleven Bundles Ditto in the Hair, seven hundred and twenty Barrels of Rice, one hundred and fifty Barrels of Pitch, eight Tons of Lignum-Vitæ, fifteen Pipes of Madera Wine, two Hogheads of Jamaica Rum, three thousand, four hundred and fifty Feet of Sheathing Boards, three thousand Staves, four hundred Reeds, and one Cask of Roots.—'Tis remarkable, that there was scarce any Indigo of an inferior Quality made in this Province last Year.

Saturday returned from a Cruise, His Majesty's Ship Tryal, commanded by James Wallace, Esq.

THOMAS SAVAGE,
THOMAS STONE, jun.
JOSEPH DILL.

To the PUBLICK.

AS nothing but your generous encouragement could crown my endeavours, and support my credit against the malicious; I should be unpardonable to let slip any opportunity of returning my sincere thanks for the encouragement received in the progress of eight years.—I value not the intended prejudice of Mr.—, and as you have been pleased to distinguish me with your constant favours, it is my interest, as well as duty, to distinguish my abilities; by endeavouring more and more to excel in the business I follow; overights and faults, no doubt, will be occasionally discovered: The best performances have their errors, but I am always ready to amend without the least imposition.—I cannot account for Mr.—'s attacking me in his advertisements: I am conscious I never merited his disrespect; why should I be envied for supporting my family and self? why should I be envied for dealing with honour and honesty? after paying forty Guineas premium, and serving seven years, have I not a right to follow my business? Can it be expected, or is it possible, that a man who knows not a wheel from a pinion, nor a movement from a motion, should give particular directions how to make up a watch? or how can such a man even pretend to know a three guinea watch from one that cost two? or a five from one that costs seven?—When a person is buying a watch, it is common for him to say, is this a good one? If he answers candidly, he will say, I am told to be my correspondent; can an unskilful person say otherwise? does it stand to reason that he can?—If I had ever sold a second hand for now, he would not have kept his undispensed of as he does.—I defy mankind to say I ever sold old for new; nor have I ever had more than seven watches changed in the eight years I have been in trade.—Take me right, I don't say, that my five and twenty pound watches cost four guineas; I say, they are equal in goodness, to those sold retail in London, for four guineas.—Thus, no doubt, appears strange to those who know nothing about the making up of watches, but so it is, and I am ready to prove it to any person who will call upon me; and he who knows the value of every article, must know what they can be made up for, and also, how to allow a living profit to his workmen. He that knows not this, cannot put a price equal to the value of either watch or clock. What I give for my work I shall not ascertain, though I will sell it thirty per cent. lower than some people do. I am, &c.
